“Watching porn isn’t chea-“

Cheating is anything against the rules those in the relationship agreed to. In some relationships, porn is cheating. In some relationships, getting triple penetrated by strangers in a truck stop bathroom is totally ok.

The dishonesty and disrespect for your partner’s boundaries is what defines cheating. Not a list of actions.

A TRUE DOM

doesn't just take control of you or try to order you around. That's not Dominance, that's bullying.

A true Dom is ALWAYS respectful, will guide you, instruct you, encourage you, help you, and drive you to reach your full potential.

Not in the bedroom, in LIFE.

A true Dom will be the most supportive person you've ever met. They'll challenge you and teach you things about yourself you never knew.

They'll bring out the very best in you.

The two kinds of people when you explain your kinks to them.

i can safeword whenever i want. period.

if i'm in the middle of receiving a punishment and i have to pee, i am allowed to safeword.

if my positioning is uncomfortable and keeping me from enjoying our play, i am allowed to safeword.

if you are about to punish me and i think we need to talk a little more about the supposed severity of my missteps, i am allowed to safeword.

if you just started punishing me and i realized i am not in the mental state to receive it right now, i am allowed to safeword.

if i'm not sure how to articulate my reasoning, or there isn't really a solid reason that i want our session to stop, i am still allowed to safeword there is literally no instance in which i am not allowed to use the safeword we have agreed upon for my comfort and safety.

Subs: Ever have those days where you just want to be shrinked down mentally and be completely physically ravaged? Give up every aspect of control and just not think?

Doms: do you get an overwhelming craving of the submission and surrender of your submissive where you just want to take complete control over her more so than just the regular daily grind? Shrink her down and consume her mind completely....

Dominants that are most likely to be safe are incredibly patient. They aren't in a rush. They understand that finding a submissive takes time. If a submissive is not ready to move forward, they will accept that. They will be honest with their needs but not push anything on a submissive.

A Definition of Collaring

BDSM BEGINNERS GUIDE

The giving and receiving of a collar is the exchange of an outward symbol of consensual ownership. Performed between the Dom/me and the sub, it must not be misconstrued or treated lightly.
REMEMBER because this is the outward sign of consensual ownership it should, if the parties are honourable, be a long lasting sign of their love and devotion to each other.
The word "consensual" is very important.
* Do not be forced into giving or receiving a collar.
* Do not accept a collar (or offer one) unless you have both fully discussed and agreed the nature of the commitment you are making to each other.
* Remember ... negotiation is the foundation for a rewarding and pleasurable relationship that will stand the passing of time.
* In this lifestyle this is the equivalent of a wedding ring, and should be looked upon as the same. It is not to be taken lightly or misused.
* Before giving/receiving discuss and make sure you both understand the full extent of this commitment.
* Having discussed in great detail your compatibility you decide that you would like to offer/receive a collar.
You now feel that you have grown towards each other, and have come to the realisation that the next step along the path is a formal collaring.
* On a final note regarding collaring. The use of training collars has become popular,and can be used in three very definate ways
1. As an outward sign that training is taking place.
2. To indicate that ownership of the sub is to be only for a limited period.
3. As a symbol of future intentions in the same way as an engagement ring may be offered.

I am Dominant.

I need to earn your submission.
I need to earn your respect.
I need to earn your trust.
I need to earn your honesty.

My purpose is to mold you into the best version of yourself that you seek to become.

@structureandtaco

I need my Dominance to be valued.
I need my Dominance to be respected.
I need my Dominance to be embraced with love.
I need my Dominance to be supported.

I am not perfect because I am Dominant.
I do not know everything because I am Dominant.
I will always strive to become a better Dominant.

I am Dominant.
I wear this title with honor.

If I tell you I want you that means your demons can come too.

May I tie you up and play with you a while?

Everyone warns you about red flags in a relationship but I want to hear about green flags

So here's some. Add your own if you'd like!

* listens to you talk when you have issues and supports you through them

* stops doing things you tell them make you uncomfortable

* compromises when necessary

* never puts you down deliberately, especially not publically

* supports your ambitions

* uses a calm rational tone during arguments

* is able to apologise when they're in the wrong

* aids your growth process

Etiquette in BDSM Part 1

So you're a Dom?

Just because you call yourself a Dom, don't expect every submissive girl/boy in BDSM to bow before you and call you Sir/Master/Daddy/Mommy or any other title you bestow on yourself. The fact is simple. Submissives are normal everyday people who happen to have one thing in common. They choose to submit to one person (after He/She earns said submission) and then it is the submissives choice to choose how to address that person. And remember this important fact: she/he maybe a submissive but they are NOT your submissive until you earn the trust, respect and consent from said submissive. Submission is never demanded, taken, asked for or assumed. If you want to call a submissive Yours then earn their submission and show him/her you are worthy of it.
